PASTOR'S NOTES:

This whole past week we have been hearing more news about the shooting last Sunday in Orlando. As Christians we have been praying for those who died, that God receive them into His loving embrace. We pray for those who have been injured, that they not lose hope but rather be restored to health. We pray for friends and family members and neighbors of the nightclub. We even pray for the man who was so consumed by hatred and violence as he now comes face to face with God.

Prayer is extremely important and effective, but is there something else we are called to do? There are actually many things our Church teaches us we need to do such as share the love of Christ with people who identify as LGBT or Q. The Church teaches that governments have a responsibility to engage in law enforcement in order to keep us all safe. We also believe that governments are responsible for working to promote a culture of life and a society at peace. This is done in many ways, but one that applies in this case was summed up briefly by St John Paul II back in 1999 "Governments must adopt appropriate measures for controlling the production, sale, importation and exportation of these instruments of death. (i.e. small arms and light weapons)" This thought is woven throughout centuries of Church teaching and prayer. Life and peace are promoted by working against cultural elements of death and the instruments of death.

People often tell me that they are praying but that they wish they could really do something. Big events carried out far away can leave us feeling helpless. However, in this case there are many things we can do. Love the people around us regardless of their religious or sexual identity. Let our law enforcement officers know that we value them and are here for them. Always treat violence and instruments of death as the enemies of peace that they are. There is plenty that we can do, if we have the courage of our faith to do it.

May God's peace be with you,
Fr Thom

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) has called for a "Fortnight for Freedom," a 14-day period of prayer, education, and action in support of religious freedom, from June 21 to July 4. The event begins with the vigil of the Feasts of St. John Fisher and St. Thomas More and ends with Independence Day. This special period of prayer, study, catechesis, and public action is intended to emphasize both our Christian and American heritage of liberty. The theme of this year's Fortnight emphasizes the many witnesses to religious freedom, both past and present.
